Tips for After Caregiver-Teacher Conferences

Being invited to a parent-teacher conference doesn't mean your child is in trouble! A parent-teacher conference is a meeting between you and your child's teacher to discuss your child's progress in school.

Send a thank-you note to the teacher. During the year, it's good to contact the teacher when you have something positive to say about what your child has learned.

Check your notes. Start right away to do the things you and the teacher agreed on. Discuss the plans with your child.

Keep in touch with the teacher to discuss progress and make adjustments as needed.
